SIXTEEN DEATHS FAIL TO AFFECT ATLANTIC HOPS

German "Ace" Makes Preparations for Westward Hop

FRENCHMEN ARE EAGER

Many Eastward Flights Are Likewise Contemplated In Near Future

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Mar. 26.—Sixteen lives have been lost in attempts to fly across the Atlantic Ocean but that will not deter other aviators from trying it again as soon as warmer weather sets in. The recent death of Elsie Mackay, the pretty, steel-nerved daughter of an English lord, and Captain Walter Hinchliffe, who vanished in an attempt to fly from Europe to America, has only served to stimulate the ambition of foreign aviators to be the first to accomplish the feat.

Captain Herman Koehl, the German "ace," is now making preparations to make the westward flight. If he succeeds he will be given a prize of 100,000 marks offered by the Aero Club of Germany. He intends to fly a plane which is of a design similar to the Brennen, in which he and his flying partner, Fritz Looze, made a start for America last fall.

France has a number of aviators who are eager to try the flight that brought disaster to Nungesser and Goll, and other brave souls. The popular choice among the French people seems to be Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrun, who have announced their intention of attempting a non-stop flight from Paris to New York. It is also probable that one of the planes that were built in France last year for such a flight, but did not get away before winter set in, may essay the hazardous westerly flight. Those planes included Taronson's Oiseau Tango and the Farman Company's Blue Bird.

Eastward flights are also contemplated this summer even though that trail has been blazed by Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin and others. Charles A. Levine, New York-to-Germany flyer, has indicated that he may attempt another long non-stop flight. Cesare Sabelli, Italian war flyer, and another as yet unnamed pilot, plan a New York-to-Rome hop in a new long range monoplane.

Thea Rasche, the German woman flyer, intends to return to the United States soon to prepare for a non-stop flight from New York to Berlin. If she accomplishes her object she will be the first woman to fly across the Atlantic, the only other woman who has come close being Miss Ruth Elder.

Of the sixteen persons who lost their lives trying to span the ocean, nine were making the westerly trip and seven were headed eastward when they met disaster. The victims included three women—Miss Mackay, Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim of England and Mrs. Frances W. Grayson of the United States.

It has been proved beyond all doubt that the westward flight, because of the stiff head winds encountered, is by far the most hazardous journey.

Coolidge May Use His Power of Veto

By William N. Neal
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Mar. 26.—President Coolidge's influence with a Congress that is already preparing for a new occupant of the White House will be put to the test in the next month under a legislative program announced today by congressional leaders.

With factions in both parties in revolt over administration proposals, the ultimate fate of flood control, farm relief, merchant marine and tax legislation was placed in doubt.

There were indications that Mr. Coolidge might resort to his veto power to enforce the administration demands upon a recalcitrant Republican majority on some measures. Hints of such action have been freely voiced by callers at the executive offices.

Flood relief for the Mississippi Valley was in the vanguard of Senate business this week, four months after Congress first convened and a year later than the disastrous flood that claimed scores of lives and $250,000,000 worth of property.

Both Senate and House committees have rejected the president's insistent demand that provision be made in any flood control bill for local contributions. This feature of the Jones Flood Control bill is expected to develop one of the bitterest legislative fights of the session in both Houses.

Before the Senate has finished with flood relief, the House is expected to be in the midst of another squabble over the McNary-Haugen bill. Mr. Coolidge has already indicated that he would veto the new measure, although farm bloc leaders claimed that nine of his ten objections to last year's bill have been met.

Do you need assistance with your housework? A help wanted "ad" in the Courier will help you.

KULPMONT, Pa., Mar. 26.—(INS)—Angeline Laccrochi, Kulpmont girl, who was acquitted of the murder of her sweetheart, Tony Popello, of Mount Carmel, in Mount Carmel last September, now plans to be married to Paul Bressi, 23, of Shamokin, in the county jail at Sunbury where she spent many weeks before her trial.

Miss Laccrochi formerly planned to be married in the Court House at Sunbury but was denied the privilege by Judge Lloyd, and the wedding was postponed indefinitely. Now she has asked Warden Reitz of the county prison for permission to marry there.

ELYSBURG, Pa., Mar. 26.—(INS)—While the storm hovered over an Irish valley home, Dr. J. K. Fisher, of Sunbury, battled snowdrifts for seven hours in a futile effort to reach the household. He finally was compelled to give up, and an Elysburg physician, pressing into service a sleigh drawn by two powerful farm horses took the assignment, but after a two hour battle with snowdrifts lost the battle by a neck. The child was born five minutes before the local physician arrived on the scene.

GET BEVERAGE IN RAID AT SOUTH LANGHORNE

Man Staggers from Home of Joseph Robino; Raid Follows

IS HELD UNDER BAIL

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Mar. 26.—Seeing a man make his exit from a residence on the Lincoln highway here, in an apparently intoxicated condition, State Troopers, located here, were later responsible for a raid conducted at the place.

In the raid carried out by Constable Atkinson, of Doylestown, there was found on the premises about 200 gallons of what is thought to be wine, and 10 quarts of alleged whiskey. The occupant of the house, Joseph Robino, was placed under $1,000 bail by Justice of the Peace Daniel Bilger, yesterday morning, and will be given a further hearing Thursday afternoon, before Squire Irvin James, at Doylestown.

The first time particular notice was called to the place was when State Police saw a man stagger from the residence Saturday evening, and make his way to an automobile. Said individual was remonstrated for endeavoring to operate a machine in his condition. He was questioned but would not give any information as to where he had secured the beverage he had apparently been drinking.

Constable Atkinson was then notified and the place was raided Sunday morning. The bottled material was all that was brought to light. Robino, with his wife and a brother were in the house at the time.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Mar. 26.—(INS)—Duquesne Gardens auditorium is no place for a tear gas salesman to display his wares, police told L. J. Matthews, of New York.

There is always a demand for that piece of furniture for which you apparently have no further use. Through the classified columns of the Courier a pleased purchaser may be found.

Newtown Man Struck By "Hit-and-Run" Driver

Struck by a hit-and-run driver at the intersection of Chancellor and Center streets, Newtown, Saturday night, John De Young, 30 years old, of Lincoln avenue, Newtown, is now in Mercer Hospital suffering from severe shock and injuries to the head and right leg.

When picked up by pedestrians who witnessed the accident, De Young was unconscious. He was revived at the office of a nearby doctor and was then hurried to the hospital in Trenton by William Randerick, of 238 South Center street, Newtown.

Witnesses say that the motorist who struck De Young sped on without rendering assistance.

John Leonard, 49 years old, of 3060 Decatur avenue, Bronx, New York City, was found by motorists beneath the wreckage of his machine, which was demolished when it ran into a telephone pole on the Lincoln Highway at South Langhorne, yesterday morning.

Leonard suffered severe lacerations of the forehead and injuries to the right ear. He was hurried to Mercer Hospital by Warren Severy, of 254 South Belvidere avenue, York, Pa., and Howard Vendershire, of 2822 North Stiles street, Philadelphia, who extricated the victim from the wreckage. The man was admitted to the institution for several hours and was later able to leave.

Leonard told Langhorne police, who investigated, that a speeding car side-swiped his machine, forcing him to the side of the road. The other motorist continued on.

FIRE SCHOOL TONIGHT; WANT ALL TO ATTEND

Instructors Will Again Be Present and Give Lessons

ARE VERY INTERESTING

The Fire School will be held as usual tonight in the municipal fire station beginning at 8 o'clock. All members of the Consolidated Department are urged to attend tonight as there is considerable instruction of importance to be given.

The Fire School has been held weekly throughout January, February and March under the direction of Chief Simmler, Captain Krause and Lieutenant Garner, and much valuable instruction has been given to the men, and much has been learned.

The Fire School has proven to be very popular, too. There has been a good attendance each week and the men have been keenly interested. The instructors have put on a series of lessons which have rounded out a course which is going to prove of great value to the fire fighters.

The men have been taught the efficient and safe way to fight fires, rescue individuals from buildings afire, administer first aid to those burned or suffocated, proper way to raise ladders, the various kinds of knots, the use of every tool in the Consolidated equipment.

The instructors have, after giving their instructions, given a practical test to the men to see if the lessons have been learned, and they express themselves as being entirely satisfied with the results which have been obtained.

ISLAND MANAGERS ENDORSE BRIDGE ACROSS THE RIVER

Burlington Organization Meets And Unanimously Adopts Resolution

URGE CITIZENS TO HELP

Believe Span Will Greatly Enhance Value of Burlington Island

BURLINGTON, N. J., Mar. 26.—At its two hundred and first organization meeting in the City Hall Friday night the Board of Island Managers got back of the proposition to build a bridge across the Delaware River from this city to Bristol and adopted a resolution endorsing the project and urging every citizen to use every means to have the much-needed fabric constructed.

The resolution which was offered by Carleton E. Sholl, of West Union street, and unanimously adopted, follows:

"Whereas, the construction of an interstate bridge between Bristol and Burlington as proposed in a federal franchise and its extension, granted to Joseph R. Cheesman, of Burlington, and Clifford L. Anderson, of Bristol, proposes to link Burlington Island with the mainland, and

"Whereas, the building of such a bridge will greatly enhance the value of Burlington Island, including that considerable portion thereof owned by the municipality and under control of the board, and will encourage a development on the entire island that will further increase the rates, a central portion of the island that has been cited by aviation experts as one of the most advantageous landing fields in the Delaware Valley providing there is adequate motor traffic connection with the mainland highways;

"Therefore be it resolved, that the managers and treasurer of the fund for the education of youth in the city of Burlington, realizing what the building of the bridge under this franchise means in general to the accommodation of constantly increasing interstate motor traffic and to the extensive development that such traffic will encourage on both sides of the river; and further, fully appreciating the advantages that will accrue to the taxpayers of the city of Burlington through the building of this bridge across the island, do hereby endorse the move for immediate construction of this span, and urges upon every citizen the support and backing of this project that holds much of promise to this section of Delaware Valley.

"Be it further resolved, that this resolution be spread upon the minutes, and that a copy thereof be forwarded to His Honor, acting mayor, Harold V. Holmes, and to Messrs. Cheesman and Anderson and to the public press."

BETTER ROADS

With the announcement that that stretch of Bristol Pike extending from the eastern boundary of Bristol Borough to the boundary of Tullytown Borough is to be concreted, joy was given to many individuals who daily traverse this stretch of highway. This is the only remaining portion of roadway between Torresdale and Trenton which is not concreted and in fact is the only section extending from the New Jersey capital to the heart of Philadelphia which is not of permanent hard surfaced construction.

Wonderful progress has been made in road improvement in and about Bristol during the past few years. It seems but yesterday when one was forced to drive over bumpy Otter, Radcliffe, Mill and Pond streets, and thence along the Bristol Pike.

Today all of these thoroughfares are of the most modern roadway construction and added to the others which, while not of concrete, have been materially improved, it would seem as though Bristol and the territory adjacent thereto has made much progress in road improvement.

RAILROADS SHOULD OWN IT

The railroads of the United States have come to the conclusion that instead of collectively losing $5,000,000 annually in the transportation of express for the American Railways Express Company they should acquire control of the latter company and receive all the income from the express business. Executives of railroads handling more than 75 per cent. of the express business of the country say the railroads will own the express business within a year.

When the several express companies merged during the war many predicted the eventual ownership of the business by the railroads. The merger was but a step toward railroad ownership. And now that railroad ownership is in sight, the public wonders why it has been so long in coming.

The $300,000,000 income of the express company could be used to good advantage by the railroads, many of which have been reporting treasury deficits regularly since the war. They might at least pull the express cars without the loss which is said to be incurred at present.

What the public is primarily interested in is whether railroad ownership of the express service would affect express rates. Lower rates might result, and it is certain the income from express transportation would be taken into consideration in fixing passenger and freight rates. As the American Railways Express Company now collects a profit for itself and pays the railroads for hauling its cars, rates should be lower under railroad ownership which would necessitate but one profit.

Great inroads into the express business have been made by parcel post but that business is still of vast proportions and could be increased. Congress frequently adds to the profits of the express company by excluding from the mails certain literature and other matter.

The ideal man, it seems, is always married to some other woman.

Once the number of rooms governed the price of a house. Now it's the number of baths.

Now and then you see a fellow who expects to become a howling success by nothing but howling.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

In the issue of the Newtown Enterprise dated December 3, 1892, there appeared the following items of interest:

While preparing for church, Clarence, son of Aaron Slack, Yardley, found a new suit of clothes missing. On inquiry, suspicion was aroused against a lodger at the young man's father's hotel, "The Continental," who had occupied a room in which the clothing was the night previous. Constable Holleran was notified and he found that the man had been kept over night by Mr. Stoop, the merchant at Taylorsville, and that the stranger's satchel was still there. The man was soon found in the vicinity of Taylorsville, and on being searched it was found he had on under his own clothes Mr. Slack's suit. In his satchel were other articles belonging to Mr. Stoop and other articles which were thought to have been stolen from other places. The man acknowledged the theft and gave his address as Pemberton, N. J. He was given a hearing before Justice Eastburn and was taken to the county prison in default of $500 bail.

A horse belonging to Samuel Sharkey, Bristol township, fell through the barn floor while drawing in a load of wheat and was killed.

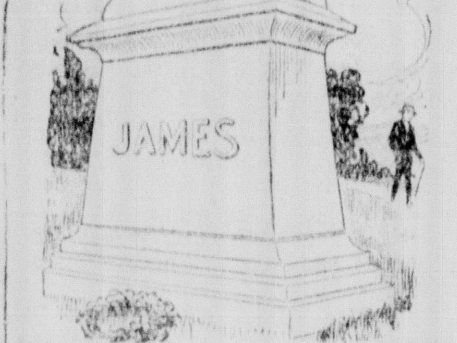

Thieves attempted to rob the harness shop of James H. Young, Langhorne. Mr. Young was aroused by an electric bell and coming to his shop, saw men running away, and about $100 worth of merchandise tied up ready to be carried off.

Several of the more intimate friends of Edward Taylor, Jr., Lower Makefield, visited the young man in the capacity of a surprise party, the event marking the occasion of his arrival at manhood. Crockinole was one of the principal divos of the evening.

Thieves entered the office of Edward Bruden, the Lehigh Coal Company's canal collector, Bristol, broke open a

THE JAZZ SINGER
NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS
Cantor Rabinowitz has trained his son, Jack, to sing the Hebrew songs of the Synagogue. On the Eve of the Day of Atonement he finds Jack singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jack runs away. Ten years elapse. Jack, now Jack Robin, a jazz singer, down on his luck, meets Mary Dale, a dancer, who obtains a part for him in her vaudeville act. Jack's happiness is complete until, in Chicago, Mary receives an offer to star in a New York musical show. Then the jazz singer realizes that she is leaving him. He confides in his friend, Buster Billings.

"Well, kid, out with it! What'd she have to say," Buster pitted his voice against the busy hum of the streets.

"Buster, Mary's had a marvelous offer, and she's leaving for New York to start rehearsals for a new musical show," Jack tried to keep the note of gladness in his voice but the effect was somewhat unsuccessful. "Isn't that fine?" he added a bit lamely.

"Sure is," Buster looked at his friend as though speculating as to his reception of the news. "Whose show is it?"

"Harry Lee's. He saw Mary's act in Brooklyn some time ago, and liked her work. She just got the wire this afternoon. Of course, I think it's a great chance for her, but I'm going to miss her," Jack looked away, not anxious to reveal the hurt that he felt, even to his friend.

"That sure is swell," Buster admitted. "An' I hope Mary gets over. But you know what I told you, kid—you've got a chance for Broadway yourself, an' don't let 'nuthin' put you off the track. Sure, you're goin' to miss Mary, but wait 'til you strike the big one. You ain't goin' to miss 'nuthin', then."

He raised his eyes to the balcony and saw his mother.

Jack nodded, but Buster's words were small comfort. For the first time in years he began to feel actually homesick. Down in his heart there came a longing for old familiar ground; for the comfort his mother had always afforded him whenever he had been hurt. He wanted to bury his head in that expansive bosom and sob out his troubles. Instead he forced himself to walk stolidly along the Avenue, keeping pace with Buster.

As they came to a tall, modern building Jack's eyes caught sight of a lobby display announcing a special madame concert given by Cantor Rosenblatt. The placard brought him to a stop, for the moment. He glanced hurriedly at his wrist watch. It was just four thirty. The concert would be over in another quarter of an hour or so. That would give him time to catch the last numbers of the musicale. He turned to Buster as he saw the latter watching him questioning.

"I-I forgot something at the theatre, Buster," he said, hesitatingly. "Suppose you run along. I'll meet you at the hotel. I'll be right over."

"Sure, kid, that's all right. See you later," Buster waved and sauntered on along the street. He had his own ideas as to why Jack was returning to the theatre, but he asked no questions.

Buster's ideas were, however, far from right. For Jack turned as though to retrace his steps, but the moment he saw that Buster was out in the crowds he stepped hurriedly into the lobby of the concert hall, dashed to the box office and purchased a ticket for the performance. The Cantor had just finished a song and had disappeared into the wings. In the semi-gloom Jack found his seat and waited for the reappearance of the performer.

A large concourse of friends gathered at the residence of Daniel Wharton, Fallsington, to welcome home his daughter, Rebecca, who had a short time previous been married to J. Everitt Wright, Lower Makefield. The young people took in Washington and adjacent points on their wedding trip, and were the recipients of many handsome gifts.

Birch McCoy, for some years managing farmer for A. C. Johnson, Bristol township, thirty-five years ago left for Seattle, Washington, on a prospecting tour. Mr. Johnson held a big sale of his Lansdowne farm prior to joining his family in Germany.

THE JAZZ SINGER
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

Looking about him Jack saw many people of his own race; well dressed music lovers who could afford to spend the afternoon at a concert. He thought of the little Synagogue back on the East Side where he had once sung these chants and prayers of his people. It seemed not at all strange to him that just as the thoughts of his home had come recurring to him but a few moments before he should suddenly find this music awaiting him. It appeared, rather, gods reasonable, as though the gods were wise and watched the movements of these insects called humans. And he waited patiently for the next number, without even consulting his program.

"The next and last number to be sung by Cantor Rosenblatt," a gentleman in afternoon clothes was now announcing from the platform. "will be the famous 'Eli, Eli.' The man bowed and retired.

The words made Jack start. "Eli, Eli"—the great cry of a troubled people. His people, Jack thought. How fitting it seemed that he should be sitting here now. He had never told his associates in the theatre of his home or his parents. He had never talked of the years of training given him by his father that he might be a Cantor. He had felt that he was a part of the theatre—that the old years had been completely lost to him. He had even felt a little queer about coming into the concert and it was for that reason that he had deserted Buster. And yet now, as he sat there, he could feel all the old impulses rising; all the old sentiments stirring. This belonged to him.

"Eli—Eli," the Cantor's voice rolled out over the auditorium. The great Walling Wall of Jerusalem with its cold timeworn stones warmed with the pressure of human forms. Women with all-enveloping shawls of soft, warm colors leaning their foreheads against the bulwark. Bearded rabbis with the Talmud before them reciting prayers. "Eli—Eli," the cry from the heart.

Jack sat staring, his eyes fixed hypnotically on the singer. To all outward appearances Jack was a well dressed, good-looking young man, spending an afternoon in a Chicago concert hall listening to a group of Hebrew songs sung by a great Cantor. But to himself Jack was once more a child, waiting in the Orchard Street Synagogue for his father's voice. The form on the platform had assumed the shape of another person; faded in shivering vibrations into the figure of Cantor Rabinowitz. The expensively dressed people about him became one with the familiar figures of his own temple.

Now he stood on the platform with the other boys of the School to sing the songs his father had taught him. He saw the Cantor's tall figure draped in the Prayer Shawl giving the signal for the beginning of the chant. He heard his own young voice surging forth. He raised his eyes to the balcony and caught a glimpse of his mother's shawled figure swaying among the women. He heard the Rabbi preaching the word of God.

And then the lights were bright and Jack was wiping the tears from his eyes. The audience was stumbling towards the doors, struggling with hats and coats. Seats were being pushed up, and the noisy call of the streets vied with the bustle of the auditorium. Slowly Jack rose and followed the crowds out into the darkening evening.

Mrs. Rabinowitz moved hurriedly about the apartment dusting, brushing the floors and carpets, and tantalizing something in a big pot with a big spoon that sent pungent odors throughout the house. "Home in a few days—home in a few days," she kept repeating to herself again and again. A knock at the door sent her scurrying.

"Ach! Hello, Clarence," she said disappointedly. A young man clad in linen knickers and vivid golf socks, topped by a blue and white blazer stepped into the room.

"Hello, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Clarence entered carrying a bundle under one arm. "I took the afternoon off. It's the Cantor's birthday so I called a meeting of the choir—"

"S-sh! The Cantor's asleep," Mrs. Rabinowitz cautioned. "So tired he is today from teaching."

"Well, we all contributed toward a little present, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Clarence held out his parcel. "So will you please present this to the Cantor with our best wishes for his continued happiness, peace, prosperity, longevity and the consistent and increasing use of his vocal chords!" The young man took a deep breath and deposited his bundle in the waiting arms of his hostess.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Mar. 26.—(INS)—The Mercersburg Academy carillon, one of the best known of its type in the United States, has one unique characteristic, according to Dr. William Mann Irvine, headmaster at the Academy. The carillon is housed in the only "singing spire" in America. All others on this continent are in towers.

Speaking before the Kittochinny Historical Society here, Dr. Irvine said that the carillon, which weighs 38,227 pounds and has 43 bells, is the gift of the late Henry D. Swope, of Mercersburg, being presented in 1909.

At the request of Dr. Irvine, the twenty heaviest bells in the Mercersburg Carillon have upon them inscriptions. The largest five bells each has a name taken from some member of Swope's family. The literary inscriptions which appear upon the twenty heaviest bells, some in Latin and some in English, make the Mercersburg bells the most beautiful inscribed among all the carillons in the world, Dr. Irvine said.

The largest bell in the Mercersburg Carillon which has the name of Roland and which has on it the inscription, "To the Glory of God," also the memorial inscription of the gift, had cast into it 223 pieces of copper of historical interest. In this collection were coins which were minted more than two thousand years ago. There were also pieces of copper from two of the flagships of Lord Nelson; from the Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship at Manila; the Oregon, which was the queen of the American Navy in the Spanish war and which sailed round the Horn in time to be present at the battle of July 3, 1898; from the Old Ironsides, this piece of copper being in the form of a bolt, presented by the Secretary of the Navy; from the Presidential yacht, the Mayflower; from the Columbia, the celebrated yacht of the late Pierpont Morgan, which twice successfully defended the America's Cup, and from her rival, the Shamrock IV, the one piece of copper being given by Morgan and the other by Sir Thomas Lipton; and from many other sources of various kinds.

Probably two of the most interesting pieces of metal was one secured from the armor plate of the Confederate Ironclad, The Merrimac in Hampton Roads, and the other being a shaving of copper from the Liberty Bell.

GRAND THEATRE

"Ben-Hur," the long awaited picture of the stage spectacle founded on Gen. Lew Wallace's immortal story, will have its first local presentation at the Grand Theatre tonight and will also be shown Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

The accompanying score is by David Mendoza and William Axt, the composers of "The Big Parade." The four principal romantic roles of the epic are taken by Ramon Novarro in the title role, Francis X. Bushman, May McAvoy and Carmel Myers. Betty Bronson, the originator of the Alma Peter Pan, is the Madonna in the Nativity scenes which form the screen prologue of the picture.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

The terrific struggle between the white and red armies of Russia, following the collapse of the Imperial government and the murder of the Czar's family, has been woven into a surprisingly dramatic story by Benjamin Christensen in "Mockery," Lon Chaney's latest picture, coming to the Riverside tonight.

Chaney's latest picture, coming to the Riverside tonight.

From a dramatic standpoint the story is said to rival anything based on the French revolution, a subject written for stories and pictures for more than a century and a quarter.

Lon Chaney, who was recently starred in "Mr. Wu" and "Tell It To The Marines," has the stellar role of a Russian peasant, suddenly elevated to power by the rising tide of bolshevism.

The picture, which was directed by Christensen, is interpreted by a cast including Ricardo Cortez and Barbara Bedford as the principal romantic characters.
